Expensive Funerals.

Bishop Timon, has taken in hand the great sbase which exists, nowhere, perhaps, to a greater extent than in Baltimore, of hiring long trains of carriages for funerals, and generally wasting money in senseless display on such occasions. The Bishop confemus "the abuses of funerals, often making them become a pastime, pleasant drive; the frequent desceration of a sacred rite and duty, the unchristian scenes, at times, occurring even in the grave-yard; the outraged feelings of real mourners; the widows and the orplans who, next day, had no food but what charity supplied, yet seldom the charity of the friends who, the day before, so freely spent their money to hire twenty or thirty carriages for the almost frolic of a funeral; the tyranny of a worse than pagan custom, forcing the poor man, on pain of being callel mean, to give his last dollar for a carriage and and leave his family next day without

It not unfrequently happens here for ingance, that a man dies leaving not enough to bury him, with a comparatively helpless family, on whose funeral from one to two handred dellars are lavished, three-fourths of which could have been much more christianly expended in being saved for his family, rather than devoted to "show" over the interment of his remains, and to accommodating the public at large with a sort of afternoon's ride for fresh air. Nothing would give us more pleasure than to see the good bishop's movement universally seconded by the clergy of all denominations, in all quarters of the country. We think moreover that our Orphan's Court might very well refuse to allow funeral expenses to be paid to the entire exhaustion of the estate. Butt. Ex.

The Broadway Dandy.

"An English Workmen" has just publishel in London a book on New York, fromwhich the following piece of description is extracted:

Oh, for the pencil of Cruikshank, or Leech, to sketch for the delectation of my readers a Broadway swell, with the stub boots and military heels an inch and a half high, his parti-colored pants, invariably too short, and so tight that it is with the greatest difficulty that he can squeeze his hands into his pockets, the national substitute for gloves; his rowdy castor, pulled down over his eyes, or balanced on the back of his head; his swallow-tailed blue coat and brass buttons, the fashions of a quarter of a century ago; his overpowering vest; his shirt front, composed of the same materials and pattern as ladies' habit skirts, lace, insertion, &c.; his face rouged and his hair curled, having gone to bed the previous night en papillotte; the sickly smell of perfumery, and lastly the dazzling effulgence of his trinkets, sown broadcast over his person. Now let us stick him on the steps of one of the large-hotels, and as he discourses eloquently, (through his nose,) of his 'gr-reat and gel-lorious ked-n-try, the tobacco stained saliva runs down over his goatee beard, and there you have a specimen of the representative man of the model Ropublic." Is not the picture a startling likeness?

Idol Worship in the United States.

The Supreme Court of California has decided that idol-worship is not forbidden by the Constitution, in the case of Eldrige vs.-The See Yup Company, wherein the plaintiff attempted to get possession of an Asylum erected by the Chinese Company. The plaintiff averred that the Trusteeship under which the Company held was void, because the building was erected for the purpose of being used partly for idol worship. The Supreme Court says:—"There is no force in the objection, that a trust, created for the purpose of idol-worship, is void. Under our Constitution, all men are permitted the free exercise of their religious opinion, provided it does not involve the commission of a public offence, nor can any distinction be made in law between the Christian or Jew, Mahomedan or heathen. The Court have no power to de- by T. J. Mehaffey. termine that this or that form of religious superstitious worship-unaccompanied by acts prohibited by law-is against public policy or morals.

We lately received, says the "Home Journal," a copy of the address delivered by ex-President John Tyler, on the one hundred and sixty-sixth anniversary of the College of upon the same occasion, recited by St. George Tucker, esq. Mr. Tyler, in his admirable address, narrates, in a graphic and interesting manner, the most important incidents connected with the College, from the date of truction by fire in 1859. During the course of the address, he asks:

"Has this old University in all the long years of her existence hung out no light to science, or en-circled her aged brow with no wreath of immortality? What wealth has she brought, what jewels has she given from her laboratory of learning? There rises up before us the form of her Jefferson, holding in his hands the bill establishing religious freedom, and the immortal Declaration-the setting free the human mind, the other emancipating a continent; and as he passes on, pointing to the sugar cane as emblematic of the extensive region of Louisiana, acquired by his wisdom and policy. Then quickly follows the silver-tongued Richard Henry Lee, exhibiting the resolution declaratory of Independence, and pointing to numberless instances of devotion to the public good, any one of which would eternize a name. Then there appears that pure patriot and good man, James Monroe, his garments stained with youthful blood, shed at the battle of Brandywine, in his hand the orange, emblematic of Florida, and pointing to a long career of valuable public service. Next follows Peyton Randolph, with the mace borne before him, emblematic of the first President of the glorious Continental Congress; and by his side walks, full of personal accomplishment, Edmund Randolph, bearing the Constitution of the United States as in part the emanation of his own great mind and of his patriotic labors. Then have we George Wythe, with "The Just" inscribed upon his escutcheon, and Edmund Pendleton, jurist, legislator, statesman. Then too, we have John Marshali, the great Chief Justice: and then, rising in quick succession, not to sear our eye balls, as did Banque's endless issue those of Macbeth, but as the honored sons of our commo mother, John Taylor of Caroline, John Kandolph of Roanoke, Wm. B. Giles, Spencer Rosne, the Lees, the Nelsons, the Blands, the Pages, the Har risons, the Carters, the Nicholases, the Tazwells, the Tuckers, the Masons, the Braxtons, the Grymeses, the Lyonses, the Prestons, and a numerous host of eminent jurists, councillors, and statesmen, each distinguished for some great quality, and many of them master workmen, who gave aid in building up the fabric of government, state and federal, and in shaping that system of domestic and foreign policy which has borne America through difficulties and dangers, and places her, in the eighty-third year of her Independence, in companionship with the most powerful nations of

And he closed with the following: "Such, as feebly represented, has William and Mary been in the past. The oldest, save one, of all the literary institutions of the United States. she has contributed her share to the public enlightenment. She has made her mark on the tablets of history, which neither fire can consume, nor dust and ashes can obscure. Twice now has her genius been driven by cruel flames from edifices creeted On this day, when she completes the hundred and sixty-sixth year, she is banished from her ancient temple. That temple is in ruins. She is not, however, without a refuge and a home. She finds it in her charter, no forfetture of which has befallen her. The law has given her a local habitation, and new temples in her name will arise for the abode of the arts and sciences, as worthy and as beautiful as those which have passed away.

BY SATURDAY EVENING'S MAILS.

THE WEATHER AND OUR CROPS .- Very sudden changes of temperature have characterized the first six months of the present William and Mary, together with the poem | year. The winter was unusually mild, and vegetation put forth at an early day. An unexpected frost in early spring cut off a quantity of fruit, and very much retarded our horticultural prospects. We were recovering, in a large measure, from the effects of its foundation, in 1693, to the hour of its des- that frost, when, on Saturday and Sunday nights last, June the 4th and 5th, the temperature suddenly changed and the thermometer stood at 38°. There was on each of these nights sufficient frost in this region to scorch the corn and bite the tobacco and other tender plants in low locations. In the Valley, the Staunton Spectator says, the gardens suffered severely- all tender vegetables were killed, and the cornfields exhibited a blighted appearance. In the Sweet Springs Valley and the Greenbrier country, the corn was cut down to the very root, and if killed, the prospect in that country will be distressing, as there is not left sufficient seed corn for replanting. A month ago we had the most splendid prospect for a wheat crop we have ever had within our recollection. No joint worm or other insect or accident had made its appearance; but within the last three weeks the vield has been cut off on many estates at least one half by the ravages of the joint worm and from sedging. With this drawback upon our calculations, we still think that Albemarle will make largely over an average erop. The corn crop has been kept back by old weather and the baked condition of the land. Though backward, it yet looks healthy and thrifty. Our tobacco plant beds were unusually successful this spring, and the "season" last week afforded a good opportunity of "planting" a large portion of the crop. Much depends upon the weather between this and the first of July for the crops in Albemarle.—Charlottesrille Adv.

THE SHOOTING AFFAIR AT THE UNIVERSI-TY.—Charles Gachet, a student from Alabama, who was arrested upon the charge of shooting with the intent to kill his fellow student, Bentley, of Kentucky, had a hearing on Friday last, before Justices Carr and Lobban, who bailed him in the sum of $500 to appear at the June County Court for further examination. At the June Court last Monday, the cause was continued until the July term, as the Commonweath was unwilling to go to trial in the absence of Bentley, the wounded man. Application was then made for bail. After hearing all the evidence and arguments of counsel, which occupied over two days, the Court let the accused to bail, fixing the penalty at ten thousand dollars, five for himself and five for his surety, to appear at the July County Court. Bail was given and the accused re-

New York Moving Up Town.

The rapid strides which trade is taking towards the northern part of this island are worthy of special attention. In 1820 New York was supposed to end at the City Hall Park. People had country houses about Union square. Grand street was a long way out of town. Steadily the tide moved up until the merchants and wealthier classes settled themselves comfortably between Canal and Fourteenth streets. Only a few years ago Broadway was crowded with promenaders between Trinity church and Chambers street. Then came the Fifth avenue, with all its gingerbread architecture; and above Union square long avenues, lined with splendid residences, opened the finest fields for official swindling. Still, the cry is, higher, higher, higher. Lower Broadway is not nearly so much crowded now as it was a few years ago, the great jam is now between Franklin street and the New York Hotel. The fashionable promenade is from Bleecker to Fourteenth st., and in the Fifth avenue above the last named point. Just now, this upward movement is a steady flow of the tide, but when the Central Park is finished, it will be a freshet .-At the present rate of proceeding, the park should be nearly done in three or four years, and then all the fine residences will be in its immediate vicinity, and all above Murray The world of fashion and that of trade will be revolutionized. Union place will be the locality for fashionable shops: dry goods palaces will take the place of Fifth evenue mansions, Madison square will be the place for the new City Hall. In point of act, Broadway will begin where it ended ten years ago. Some clever people have already acted upon this idea, and within the next year there will be remarkable changes in Union square. The fine house and stables known as the Penniman estate, near the corner of Fourteenth street, have been in the market for sale, and we understand that they are to be converted into a carriage repository. The work upon Mr. Stewart's new theatre, between Union Place Hotel and the corner of Fourth avenue, has been commenced, and other changes in the square are contemplated,-Really New York is moving up town .- New York Herald.
